

Funding Your Future

When it comes to planning for retirement, the first thought might be that living in our long-term homes, (where the mortgage is paid for) is the most cost-effective plan. But what does “aging in place” in our long-time homes truly cost us?

AARP finds that the costs of maintaining a house and the property it sits on can be overwhelming and expensive as you age. Not only do you need to consider unpredictable home maintenance costs and property taxes, but modifications to your home may be needed to ensure your continued safety. These modifications – including nonslip flooring and shower surfaces, wider doorways and step-free layouts – add up.

Along with the consideration of the cost of property maintenance and upgrades, keep in mind that healthcare needs may change, and you’ll want a cost-effective plan in place should this happen.

That’s why The Atrium at Navesink Harbor makes planning for retirement easy. As a continuing care retirement community (CCRC), we offer a financially secure lifestyle and peace of mind that your needs will be taken care of, now and in the future.

The Perks of Senior Living Financing

Choosing a CCRC means enjoying an active, engaging life with comfort in knowing a plan is in place for your future. And, with a maintenance-free lifestyle, our attentive team members take care of the little things so residents can pursue enriching activities on campus and in the region.

With a full continuum of care available right on campus, you’re able to transition seamlessly from one level of care to another should your needs change. The Lifecare option guarantees residents the care they need at predictable monthly payments – for as long as they need – at rates similar to those paid in independent living.

Now the real question is: how can I afford this? Thankfully, there are a variety of options for you to consider when making the move. The most common way includes personal income and savings.
